Kia ora koutou,

As I'm sure you know the coalition agreements of the three parties forming the government have been released today. Penny Simmons has been announced as the Minister for Tertiary Education and Skills. She will serve as a Minister outside Cabinet.

I have attached the two coalition agreements. They are constructed so that unless changed by the agreements the National Party's election commitments (as reflected in their 100 day plan and Economic Plan) remain. That means that the overriding commitment is to begin the disestablishment of Te Pūkenga within the first 100 days. You will see that there are also commitments to retain apprentice boost and to change fees free to apply to the last year of study, not the first. There are a range of other important signals in the coalition agreements relating to free speech in tertiary education providers, to efficiency and cost benefit analysis, to Te Reo names, to co-governance and to Te Tiriti references and principles which will impact on us.

We don't expect to have a great deal more clarity until we have met with or heard from our new Minister. The BIM is ready to go and will shortly be signed out by our Chair.

We have a number of complex issues to navigate in terms of our current appointment and change processes. Beyond that we don't really know a lot more than we did prior to the election.

Coalition Agreement 2023-26 (National Takes the Lead)

The Coalition Agreements and Ministerial list have been released for the new National-ACT-NZ First Government. National's policies will be the most important for tertiary education in the new Government, but the other parties have had some wins (but mainly on the margin in tertiary education). National will hold all the Ministerial roles key to tertiary education, including a Tertiary Education and Skills role outside Cabinet for Penny Simmonds.

Our Take

- National's policies and people will be the most important for tertiary education in the new Government. While NZ First and ACT have specific policy wins (see below), they have both agreed to key National policies that include:
 - an MOU with Waikato Uni over a third medical school (ACT required a full cost benefit analysis before a binding agreement);
 - beginning "disestablishing the Te Pūkenga polytech mega-merger and restoring local decision-making";
 - a bonding scheme for nursing and midwifery;
 - priority processing at Immigration New Zealand; and
 - reviving international education.
- National and ACT policies to end funding for WDCs and RSLGs, or to end Te Ara Paerangi Future Pathways, are NOT part of the agreements, in our view, but we'll keep seeking clarity. There is also no review of higher education funding, no mention of PTEs or wānanga, and no cutting of half-price public transport people to those aged under 25.
- The high-level bullet point on reviving international education in National's 100-point plan was linked to a much more detailed announcement that covered things like expanded work rights for international students. The other parties aren't, in our view, committed to those details, but they will work through that in their own way.
- NZ First and ACT both agreed on:
 - shifting Fees Free from a first year to a third year approach, with no change before 2025 (given attrition of students, that will reduce the cost);
 - improving recognition of overseas medical professionals' qualifications (ACT also got a review of health occupational licensing); and
 - removing co-governance of public services, and the use of race, rather than need, in prioritising such services, while also reviewing how Treaty principles are implemented (those policies have a wider impact, but will affect tertiary education).
- ACT got a commitment to a legislative change requiring tertiary education providers to have free speech policies. ACT put up a Bill on that issue, which was voted down in May 2022 – see our review).

- NZ First gained commitments to maintain Apprenticeship Boost and liberalise genetic engineering laws (National and ACT both supported that too pre-election), as well as some immigration reviews.
- Penny Simmonds picks up Tertiary Education and Skills in a role outside Cabinet, while Erica Stanford combines Education and Immigration (and will likely bring a strong focus on export education issues to that).
- The main Ministers relating to tertiary education are all from National – that includes the relevant education portfolios (ACT’s David Seymour has a partnership schools associate role), immigration, social development and employment, and science, innovation and technology. We’ve included two other portfolios in that grouping that may be quite important: Nicola Willis’ Social Investment portfolio (picking up on earlier work led by Bill English) and Tama Potaka’s Māori Crown Relations role (new approaches to Te Tiriti o Waitangi are likely).

Key Facts

- The National, ACT and NZ First parties have released their coalition agreements (National-Act agreement, National-NZ First agreement) and Ministerial list.
- The two coalition agreements share many common sections, but differ on policy priorities.
- Both smaller parties have agreed to support National’s key policy documents, such as their fiscal plan, tax plan, 100-day plan and 100-point economic plan (ACT also supported the eight-point commitment card). Specific policy wins for a smaller party override that general support of National’s policies. In practice, that means that the following National policies will take effect (all bullets are direct quotes, unless italicised).
 - Fiscal Plan
 - Included funding for: prioritising increases in funding for health and education to account for inflation; training more nurses, midwives and doctors (including capital funding for a Waikato Uni medical school); and continuing Apprenticeship Boost.
 - 100 Day Action Plan
 - Sign an MOU with Waikato Uni to progress a third medical school. ACT required a full cost benefit analysis before a binding agreement.
 - Begin disestablishing the Te Pūkenga polytech mega-merger and restoring local decision-making.
 - 100-Point Economic Plan
 - Help young people off welfare and into work, with targeted support to get a job combined with sanctions for those who don’t do their bit.
 - Undo the disastrous Te Pūkenga polytechnic mega merger and return control back to the regions.
 - Incentivise more people to study nursing and midwifery, and to stay here with a bonding scheme that will pay their student loan for five years if they commit to working in New Zealand.
 - Establish a relocation support scheme, offering up to 1000 qualified overseas nurses and midwives relocation grants worth up to $10,000 each to support their move to New Zealand.
 - Introduce an International Graduates Visa – a three-year open work visa for highly educated people who have graduated with a bachelor’s degree or higher within the last five years from one of the top 100 universities in the world.
 - Introduce priority processing at Immigration New Zealand, where visa applicants can pay an additional fee to fast-track their visa application.
 - Revive international education to boost export revenue, create job opportunities, and strengthen global connections that will drive economic growth in New Zealand.
- The smaller parties also agreed to each other’s policy initiatives.
- The key elements for tertiary education in the National-ACT agreement are listed below (all bullets are direct quotes, unless italicised).

- ...details of the Fiscal Plan may be subject to amendment in response to significant new information or events.
- Full cost benefit analysis must be presented before any binding agreement is made with respect to the Waikato medical school.
- In consultation with the relevant Minister, carry out regulation sector reviews, which could include... healthcare occupational licencing...
- Replace the Fees Free programme with a final year fees free policy with no change before 2025.
- Amend the Education and Training Act 2020 such that tertiary education providers receiving taxpayer funding must commit to a free speech policy.
- Better recognise people with overseas medical qualifications and experience for accreditation in New Zealand including consideration of an occupations tribunal.
- Immediately issue stop-work notices on several workstreams, including:... Industry Transformation Plans...
- Remove co-governance from the delivery of public services.
- Issue a Cabinet Office circular to all central government organisations that it is the Government's expectation that public services should be prioritised on the basis of need, not race, within the first six months of Government.
- Introduce a Treaty Principles Bill based on existing ACT policy and support it to a Select Committee as soon as practicable.
- The key elements for tertiary education in the National-NZ First agreement are listed below (all bullets are direct quotes, unless italicised).
 - Cut health waiting times by training more doctors, nurses and midwives... (supporting a National policy).
 - Reduce Core Crown expenditure as a proportion of the overall economy.
 - Investigate the establishment of an "Essential Worker" workforce planning mechanism to better plan for skill or labour shortages in the long term.
 - Address and provide solutions for the long-expressed concern of the OECD into the lack of focus in New Zealand Immigration Policy.
 - Liberalise genetic engineering laws while ensuring strong protections for human health and the environment.
 - Stop first year Fees Free and replace with a final year Fees Free with no change before 2025.
 - Maintain the Apprenticeship Boost scheme.
 - Better recognise people with overseas medical qualifications and experience for accreditation in New Zealand.
 - Remove co-governance from the delivery of public services.
 - As a matter of urgency, issue a Cabinet Office circular to all central government organisations that it is the Government's expectation that public services should be prioritised on the basis of need, not race.
 - Remove co-governance from the delivery of public services.
 - Conduct a comprehensive review of all legislation (except when it is related to, or substantive to, existing full and final Treaty settlements) that includes "The Principles of the Treaty of Waitangi" and replace all such references with specific words relating to the relevance and application of the Treaty, or repeal the references.
- The key Ministers relating to tertiary education are:
 - Education, Immigration – Erica Stanford (National)
 - Tertiary Education and Skills, Associate Social Development and Employment – Penny Simmonds (National, outside Cabinet)
 - Finance, Social Investment – Nicola Willis (National)
 - Science, Innovation & Technology – Judith Collins (National)
 - Social Development & Employment – Louise Upston (National)
 - Māori Crown Relations: Te Arawhiti, Māori Development – Tama Potaka (National)

A note from Board Chair Murray Strong

Kia ora koutou,

I wanted to take this opportunity to share with you an update following today's announcements from the incoming Government, and what these may mean for Te Pūkenga and our work to transform vocational education and training in Aotearoa New Zealand.

We now know that the new Minister of Tertiary Education and Skills will be Hon. Penny Simmonds. Many of you will know her from her time as Chief Executive of SIT. Our congratulations to the incoming Minister on her appointment!

Te Pūkenga is a Crown Entity and our obligation is to implement Government policy. We have prepared a comprehensive Briefing for the Incoming Minister, and will seek a meeting with her as soon as possible, to update her on the progress we have made so far, and look forward to receiving her direction for the future.

What we can see so far is a commitment to the National Party's election policies and 100 day plan, a commitment to retain the Apprenticeship Boost scheme, and a promised shift of fees free from the first year of study to the last.

I know the last few weeks have been an uncertain period for many kaimahi. In addition to the final decisions on the shape of the new Government, many of you have been going through interview processes for roles in our new organisational structure.

The Council and I thank you for your patience and commitment to our ākongā, employers and your colleagues. It has been inspiring to see the quality of work that you have continued to produce to deliver better vocational education and training outcomes for our country.

We will keep you updated over the coming weeks as the new Government takes shape and when we receive a new Ministerial Letter of Expectations. In the meantime, I encourage you to reach out to your team leaders and PCW representatives for support and guidance, and to continue to support each other.

Thank you again for the contribution you make to changing lives through education and training.

Ngā mihi nui,

Murray Strong
Tumuaki Kaunihera
Chairman

Subject: BusinessNZ view of coalition and tertiary education

From BusinessDesk. The full article is below but this is BusinessNZ's comment on tertiary education:

But BusinessNZ wasn't happy to see tertiary education split out with National's Penny Simmonds appointed minister of tertiary education and skills outside cabinet. "Given the challenges in the tertiary sector and the need to bring the skills agenda in line with immigration and employment policies, it is disappointing this portfolio is not included within the education and immigration cluster."

BusinessNZ enthusiastic on coalition agreement

Fri, 24 Nov 2023

BusinessNZ says the new government's focus on policies that support business and economic health will be well received by New Zealand businesses.

BusinessNZ chief executive Kirk Hope said his organisation had advocated for many of the policies the incoming government had adopted, including cutting regulatory red tape and unnecessary costs for businesses.

Ministerial appointments would enable a balanced introduction of the three parties and policy priorities, and the layer of responsibilities was better than expected, Hope said. Most of the critical issues put forward by the National party in their 100-day plan had been retained, except for the foreign buyer tax.

BusinessNZ said in a statement the appointment of David Seymour in the newly created minister for regulation role was a win, due to the strength of his campaigning for a reduction in unnecessary business regulation.

It had long advocated for such a role and would be watching the performance of the portfolio closely.

The appointment of Nicola Willis as finance minister boded well for refocusing the Reserve Bank of NZ solely on price stability.

BusinessNZ praised the appointment of Act MP Brooke van Velden as minister for workplace relations and safety as the party had a detailed employment relations agenda, which was aligned with business. Having Van Velden in the role would also help to achieve changes such as repealing fair pay agreements and making changes to contracting and holidays legislation.

The organisation was happy to see NZ First leader Winston Peters back as minister of foreign affairs, given his past success in the role.

It appeared more muted over the appointment of his party colleague Shane Jones as minister for regional development while noting it was a logical outcome.

"Business will want to see NZ First's enthusiasm for regional development tempered by budgetary constraints facing the new government overall."

Erica Stanford's appointment as minister of education and minister of immigration was seen as a win as these were the two sources of labour supply. But BusinessNZ wasn't happy to see tertiary education split out with National's Penny Simmonds appointed minister of tertiary education and skills outside cabinet.

"Given the challenges in the tertiary sector and the need to bring the skills agenda in line with immigration and employment policies, it is disappointing this portfolio is not included within the education and immigration cluster."

Having Shane Reti as health minister was a positive move, and he was well connected in the Māori community and across their health issues.

While coalition partners agreed on change for Pharmac, new investment for cancer and other treatments was still complex, as crown revenues would be weaker in the short term.

"Reprioritisation may help without being a silver bullet," BusinessNZ said.

100 days and counting for 'hugely ambitious' plan

Rebecca Howard Wed, 29 Nov 2023

Prime minister Christopher Luxon has laid out the government's plan for its first 100 days in office.

"New Zealanders voted not only for a change of government, but for a change of policies and a change of approach – and our coalition government is ready to deliver that change," he said.

Luxon said the plan is "hugely ambitious" but said "we will be working as hard as we can".

The 49 actions include introducing legislation to remove the Auckland regional fuel tax, repealing the clean car discount scheme and introducing legislation to refocus the Reserve Bank of NZ (RBNZ) on a single mandate of price stability. RBNZ governor Adrian Orr said he met yesterday with finance minister Nicola Willis and PM Luxon as part of regular meetings in advance of today's monetary policy statement.

"The vibe in the room? Incredibly constructive and highly focused on the job at hand," he said. Orr said he was aware of the plans to change the remit, but "at this point, we have not been consulted on the remit change".

Below is a full list of the 49 actions.

Rebuild the economy and ease the cost of living

1. Stop work on the Income Insurance Scheme.
2. Stop work on Industry Transformation Plans.
3. Stop work on the Lake Onslow pumped hydro scheme.
4. Begin efforts to double renewable energy production, including a NPS on Renewable Electricity Generation.

Mōrena Team,

In case you didn't see this yesterday. As I have previously advised Peter and Murray meeting with Penny today.

Our focus has to be on continuing to ensure that we develop a strong vocational education system with good leadership.

I will update you all as soon as I know more. As Andrew said yesterday, it is not as if we don't know how to cope with change

Stay strong, look after our kaimahi and look after yourselves

Ngā mihi
Megan

This sounds like a sensible approach.

Yes – for our internal records we can place the project ‘on hold’ in the sharepoint list - we will transfer info from the working spreadsheet into the Sharepoint list next week.

As discussed, I think we pause on this one.

s 9(2)(a) – it should stay in our list but is there a way of showing an ‘on hold’ status for now?

Mōrena s 9(2)(a)

We’ve got a first draft of the Water Reforms project plans, but in light of the govt’s 100 day plan, and what I consider quite a strong statement about repealing the legislation here, I’m wondering if it’s worth continuing to develop this plan.

I’d imagine that even if the legislation gets repealed there’ll still need to be a plan to address the issues, and that would still require a role from us in upskilling, training etc.

Happy to take your steer on this one; my sense is to pause it.

He kōrero mai i a Peter Winder A note from Peter Winder

Ngā mihi nui ki a koutou

Yesterday, Board Chair Murray Strong and I met with new Minister of Tertiary Education and Skills, Hon. Penny Simmonds. Many of you will know her from her tenure as Chief Executive of Southern Institute of Technology (SIT). As you will have seen in the Government's 100 day plan announcements, the Government intends to "begin disestablishing Te Pūkenga". The Minister has undertaken to provide us with a new Letter of Expectations shortly. Once we receive this, we will have greater clarity about the direction the Government wishes to take in relation to vocational education and training.

Until we receive greater clarity, I can appreciate the stress and anxiousness that you may be feeling. Please do reach out to your leaders and our PCW team, and look after each other.

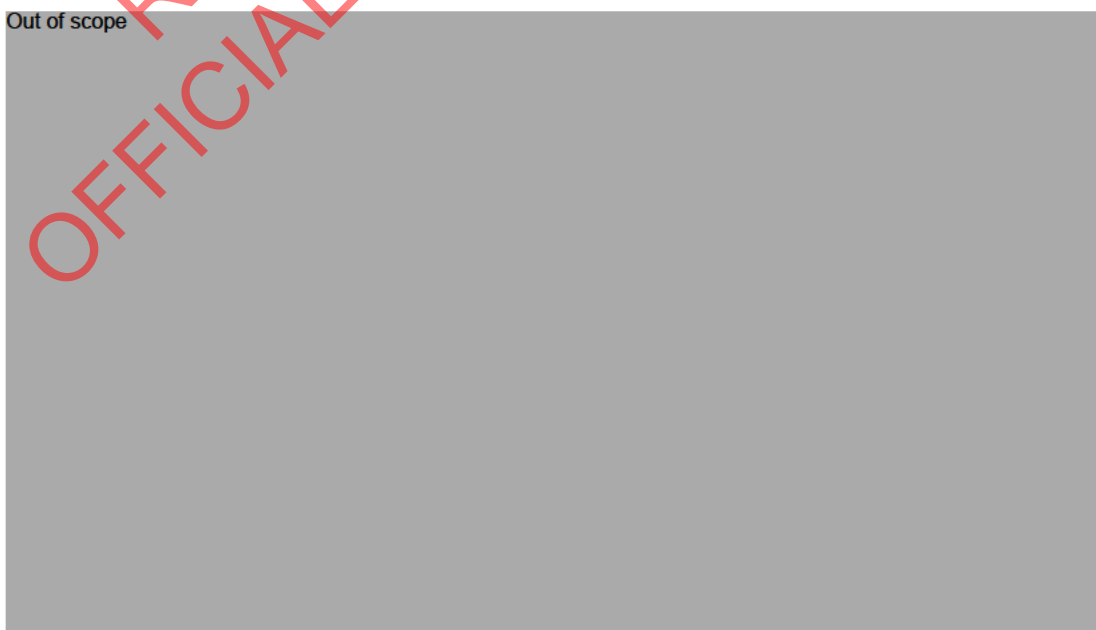

While these are uncertain times, I also encourage you to remember our purpose and our commitment to delivering excellent vocational education and training for our ākonga, employers and communities.

Subject: FW: Media wrap - week ending 1 Dec 2023

Kia ora

Here is this week's media wrap. Highlights for this week include the opening of Te Kotahi Oranga | Health and Wellness Centre at Wintec, OPSITARA 2023 at SIT, and a new kaiāwhina training initiative through Careerforce. (media releases below).

Most news media attention has been on the new Government's 100-day plan and after a quiet few weeks in the reactive media space, we fielded a flurry of questions on the future of Te Pūkenga.

Media responses

s 9(2)(a) from Stuff asked about Teresa Pollard's resignation, progress with the Digital consultation and the Government's plan to disestablish Te Pūkenga. We provided this response: TPM0281 - REQUEST - Stuff new Govt & Digital.docx

s 9(2)(a) of the Otago Daily Times asked about the plans to disestablish Te Pūkenga. We provided this response: TPM0282 - REQUEST - ODT new Govt.docx

s 9(2)(a) of Newshub asked about the cost of rebranding to Te Pūkenga. We provided this response: TPM0283 - REQUEST - Newshub rebranding cost.docx s 9(2)(a) of the Greymouth Star also asked about rebranding costs and we provided the same response.

TEU Media Release.

7 December 2023

Where's the vision?

Te Hautū Kahurangi | Tertiary Education Union is deeply concerned for the future of vocational education, in light of the National government commencing implementation of its 100-day plan commitment to "begin disestablishing Te Pūkenga".

Te Pou Ahurei | National Secretary Sandra Grey says "this is a group of staff and students that is way beyond change fatigued. Our members have been scared for their jobs for as long as they can remember."

"After years of working for struggling regional polytechnics that constantly cut courses and provision, they transferred to Te Pūkenga which for better or worse has led to enormous restructuring of the entire sector. Now the new government wants to abandon the hundreds of millions of dollars of work that has been done with no plan for what comes next."

"We didn't ask for Te Pūkenga to be established, and we often disagreed with the direction it was going in and the adequacy of its resourcing, but at least there was a vision behind it. What is Penny Simmonds' vision for the sector?"

"This next round of upheaval will be expensive – it will involve up to sixteen new layers of management depending on how many entities Te Pūkenga is replaced with. That's up to 16 new Chief Executives and supporting functions which we estimate will cost taxpayers over $63 million in itself. How does this square with the government's avowed commitment to spending our money wisely?"

"Then there is the enormous cost this will continue to have due to staff and students who are already voting with their feet."

"The minister needs to slow down and talk this through with the sector before she goes any further or this will blow up in her face."
